Dear Dr White

Re: Ms Lola Duval, DOB: 27/06/1990

Thank you for seeing Ms Duval, a 24-year-old university student, with a provisional diagnosis of hyperthyroidism.

On 31/05/2014, Ms Duval presented complaining of losing 10 Kgs over the past 2 months despite of eating well and having good appetite. Unintentional weight loss and feeling tired caused Ms Duval anxiety. She further mentioned that she had experienced sweating, tremors and heat intolerance.
Occasional palpitations have been reported. On examination, her vital signs were normal. Her thyroid was slightly enlarged and tender. Tremors were seen bilaterally. Her eye examination showed exophthalmos together with lid lag. Appropriate investigations were ordered for her.

Today, Ms Duval's ECG showed sinus tachycardia. Her thyroid function tests revealed ~~depressed~~ suppressed thyroid stimulating hormone due to elevated T3 and T4 which pointed out hyperthyroid status mostly due to Grave's disease. To further investigate the reason for hyperthyroidism, thyroid scan and thyroid autoantibodies were requested.

Based on the above and due to Ms Duval's anxiety, I would be grateful if you could give her early attention.

Should be there any queries, please contact me immediately.

Yours sincerely,
Doctor
